September 1, 1995

All men will come to him who keeps to the one,
For there lie rest and happiness and peace.

Passersby may stop for music and good food,
But a description of the Tao
Seems without substance or flavor.
It cannot be seen, it cannot be heard,
And yet it cannot be exhausted.

INDIA TOUR 1995
Notice No 2 29th August

Travel

It seems that India Tour is now starting a little later than originally advised. The first day of the tour is Saturday 2nd December in Delhi. This will affect our departure, which instead of being the 26th November is now likely to be 29th or 30th November, subject to the travel agent being able to transfer the seats being held.

The tour will travel from Delhi to Chandigarh, Yamuna Nagar, Dehradun, Lucknow, Varanasi, Bombay, Kolhapur and Ganapatipule.

The tour still finishes on the morning of Sunday 31st December at Ganapatipule, and the whole of that day will be taken up with travel by bus back to Bombay. We will be able to stay at Washi and depart for Bombay Airport on the evening of 1st January 1996. Those on the short tour will leave from there for Australia. Those on the full tour will fly to Delhi, transfer to Delhi International Airport, and depart just after midnight on 2nd January for Australia via Bangkok, arriving early morning 3rd January. Australia and its Future

(based upon material published SMH August 12)

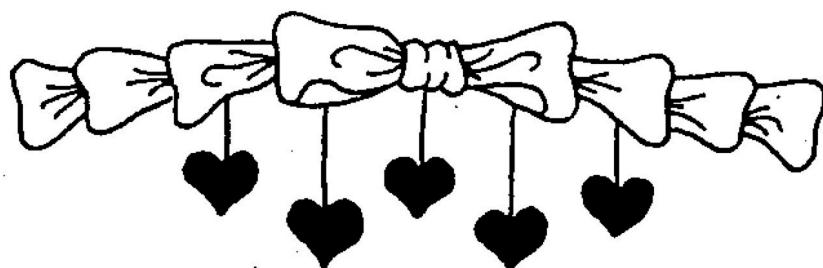

An unheralded event occurred on November 16, 1994 which may have far reaching implications for Australia's future. On that day under the UN sponsored proposal known as the Law of the Sea Treaty a whole new set of lines came quietly into force around the world, and in the process a new type of power was created, one based on ecological sovereignty.

No nation gained more on November 16 than Australia, which claimed legal stewardship and exclusive economic rights over a prodigious expanse of land, costal sea, continental shelf and Antarctic icecap. It is the largest area of stewardship in the world, stretching over 28.5 million square kilometres, more than any other country. The convention has given Australia vast new territory to manage and to protect the living resources from harm. Australia's zeal in apposing the resumption of nuclear testing has demonstrated that the nation has embraced the new realities of environmental preservation. Australia now has broad maritime jurisdictions and with a strong conservation agenda provides an essential barrier to the despoliation of the oceans.

Economists have projected that the farming and harvesting of Australia's waters will overtake beef as an export industry early next century, especially given the Asian appetite for seafood. By every measure the sea has twice as much biological richness as the land. Under the Law of the Sea treaty, rights extend to harvesting of the sea, the sea bed, and the subsoil beneath. As long as such economic development is sustainable and managed with a view of the long term effects upon the eco-system.

In the information age and the globalized economy, Australia has position itself as a free-trade champion and is well suited to support its new role as a ecological superpower. Australia is also unique among the advanced industrial nations in having a culture that is acutely aware by sheer force of circumstances, of the limitations imposed by nature. Australia as a culture has long adapted to its environment rather than sought to dominate it. The sheer size and scale of our environment has meant this is the only rational approach. This sense of limitation, so different from the imperialism of the past, is an important intellectual resource. It matters, just as the character of a nation largely determines its ability to project its values abroad.

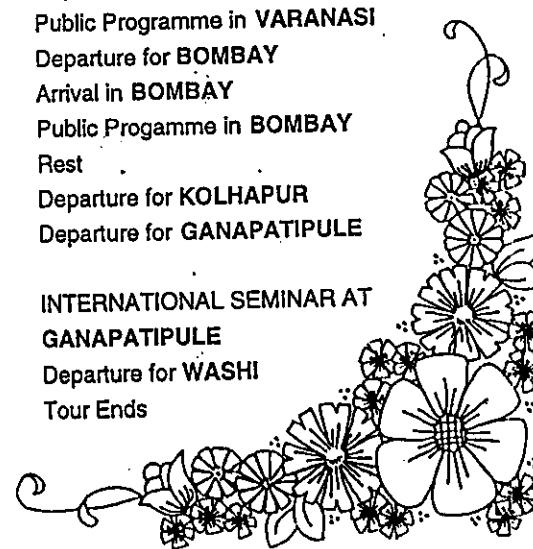

For all the recent talk about Australia's multiculturalism, Australia does have a coherent overriding culture - a deep egalitarianism that overshadows all other nuances of the sub-tribes that make up Australia. This ingrained cohering sense of fairness, of fair go, is more important than all the ocean territory we now effectively own, and has helped create a sectarian society where people of all countries have been blended into one nation.

LAST WEEKEND's Redfern Festival was very successful. Two years ago Sahaja Yoga had a stall at this festival which was poorly received. This year the stall was full and people were crowding around Shri Mataji's photograph. Approximately 100 people received their realization including twenty Aboriginal adults and children.

This message came in from France last night.

DIWALI PUJA

October 28/29/30 Nargol India

For, the auspicious occasion of the Diwali Puja, the Sahaja Yogis of India and France are most delighted to invite the Sahaja Yogis from all the world to worship and praise our Divine Mother Shri Mataji Nirmala Devi, under the form of Shri Laxmi. The Puja will take place at Nargol (3 hours by bus from Bombay), where Shri Adi Shakti after a long meditation, opened the collective Sahasrara 25 years ago.

In order to be able to welcome you in the best conditions for this unique event, we would need your help in getting, as soon as possible, an estimation of the number of brothers, sisters and children from your country expecting to attend the Puja. By the end of September we would need the exact numbers and your flight details.

The accommodations will be in Pendals and so, sleeping bags will be needed. The price will be as usual, but a second letter will be sent by the end of September to give all the final details. As the Diwali Puja is in India, the weddings ceremony this year will most probably take place only in Ganapatipule during the India Tour. However, we would be very grateful to receive the marriage application forms (for Diwali occasion) before the Navaratri Puja, in order for HH Shri Mataji to take a decision. Please keep a copy with you so that you can use it again for the India Tour if the weddings do not take place during Diwali Puja time.

Would those who have made arrangements to go to India for Diwali Puja or those who wish to accept this invitation please give their details to Greta More at 40 Beresford Road, Strathfield 2135 N.S.W. Greta has kindly agreed to co-ordinate this, but to help her please put the following information in writing to her straight away:

1. Name.
2. Passport number and country of issue.
3. Flight arrival details in India.
4. Flight departure details from India.

NOTE: Greta is not making travel arrangements; that you have to do yourself. She is just compiling the information.

The cost of the three days of the puja: 28th, 29th, 30th of October would be POUNDS STERLING 108. Best to have this in cash. Further information will be sent from France and made available to those going to the puja by the end of September.

Mention is made of the possibility of marriages at Diwali. This used to apply more to those who could not make it to India Tour and the Wedding ceremony at Ganapatipule. I don't think it is relevant to us in Australia. But, marriage application forms can be obtained from Peter Brownscombe or Bevan Pearce at Burwood. Not to be confused with India Tour for which marriage application forms will be sent out.

Michael.
